They then rifled his pockets of $32 in money and a gold watch and chain, after which they made their escape.

Burke, bleeding from several wounds, went to the Mercer street police station, where he gave a slight description of the men to Detectives Peterman and Dourrigan.

About two hours later the detectives found the three men hiding in a tenement house in Minetta lane. They took them to the station-house, where they were locked up.

A portion of the stolen property was found. Burke, who did not believe that he was badly injured, had his wounds dressed by an ambulance surgeon and went home.

brewery, had turned them out of the house and told them never to return unless they could pay for their board. Loseph told Justice Feitner that they were unable to find anything to do, and in their travels ran across Doran, who induced them to become thieves.

He said that Doran had threatened to beat both of them and, knowing that he also carried a knife, they feared him and did as he requested. Doran makes his home under the garbage dump at the foot of East Forty-sixth street.

At 2.15 o'clock this morning, Policeman Holden, of the East Fifty-first street station, saw the trio coming along Second avenue from Forty-seventh street. Andrew had a light harness partially conceiled under his coat. On seeing the officer, they scattered and fied. Bolden gave chase after Andrew and caught him. He caid that the harness had been stolen from the otable of John H. Rozze, a milk-dealer, 2t 337 East Forty-seventh street, and gave the names of his componions. They were captured an hour later under the ash dump.

were captured an hour later under the ash dump.

The Ernst brothers are undoubtedly afraid of Doran. They said that Doran took them out last night, and when they reached Rogge's stable ordered them to break into the place and get all the harness they could lay their hands on, while he would watch on the outside. He wound up his demand with a blood-curdling threat, and Joseph then climbed up the ladder to the first floor and stoly the harness found in Andrew's possession. Justice Feitner held the prisoners for trial in default of $500 bail each.

All of the lack are newsboys. Lorent wasn't making enough money at Twenty-third street, where he had been selling papers, so he went to Thirty-ninth street and Broadway.

His presence here was resented by four boys, who wanted to have a monopoly in the neighborhood. Last night, after Lorent had nearly "sold out." It is alleged, they held him up.

The four boys, he claims, took from him a counterfeit half slolar, which he was carrying, he said, for luck, 65 cents in good money and several papers. Then they ran away to Thirty mutic street. Lorent ran after them, shouting, and west of Seventh syenue Feliceman Mc-Laughlin gathered in Gallenberg and Vogel as they ran past.

The boys were remanded until Monday morning and sent to the rooms of the Gerry Society.

Detective-Sergeants Becker and Kennedy, of the Stagg street station, Williamsburg, believe they made an important arrest when they captured Joseph Laui, nineteen years old, whom Justice Watson held for examination in the Watson held for examination in the Ewen Street Court this morning.

For the past month or so a number of tailors have been complaining that their cellars have been entered and woollen goods stolen. The detectives have been watching Laui for some time, and last night they took him in custody. Goods found at his house were identified by Marcus Klein, of 188 Johnson avenue, and Isaac Greenblatt, of 46 Ewen street, and hoth of them made charges of burglary against him to-day.

Scarcely had Moses Clarke breathed his last when the watchers, according to Mr. Purdy, began to discuss how they could get the indictments from the safe.

They tried to operate the combination lock, but were compelled to give it up.

The Safe Broken Open. the Great Destroyer, and that was the moment when the lottery men trembled.

The Safe Broken Open.

They sent for a notorious safe-breaker, says Mr. Purdy—a burgler, one whose name was then as now well known to the police, and he did as directed.

The safe was opened, and although it was midsummer, a large fire was built and the indictments thrown into it. It was the intention only to destroy the lottery indictments, but there were so many others, and all in such confusion, that it would have taken too much time to sort them out. So all that were found were thrown into the blaze with the evidence in each case, and the three men stood there for hours poking the embers and not leaving until nothing but a heap of ashes remained. Even the ashes were raked, so that not as much as a sign should be left to tell the story. Then they returned to New York.

Later on Moses Clarke was buried, and politicians without number followed the casket to the grave.

Later still, when Goy. Cornell issued his proclamation calling upon the prosecuting officers throughout the State to enforce the law against the lottery ments found in this county, but, of course, without result.
